

Total Number of Ads Printed in
"The World" During the Month of December, 1891..... 59,014
Same Month in 1890..... 52,659
A Gain of..... 6,355

PRICE ONE CENT.

IN FEAR OF LAW.

Dive-Keepers Taught a Wholesome
Lesson in Decency.

The Dens Kept by Many of Them
Are Closed for Good.

But There Are Other Outlaws Yet to Be Gathered In.

Some Places of Evil Resort on the Bowery that Need Raiding.

NEW YORK'S OUTLAWS.

[A Table Subject to Daily Change.]
BILLY MCGILROY.....Indicted.
TOM GOULD.....Indicted.
JOHN KELLY.....Indicted.
CARREY WELCH.....Indicted.
THOMAS MCCORMICK.....Indicted.
DANIEL MCGILROY.....Indicted.
AUGUST GUIDON.....Indicted.
J. H. MCGILROY.....Indicted.
PAUL MCCARTHY.....Indicted.
A. McALEER.....Indicted.
LOUIS WALKER.....Indicted.
JAMES LYNCH.....Indicted.
CHARLES SMITH.....Indicted.
FRANK STEVENSON.....Indicted.
MANAGER DAVIS.....Indicted.
JIM SULLIVAN.....Indicted.
KEEPEE OF 84 BOND ST.....Indicted.
KEEPEE OF THE LENOX.....Indicted.
LOUIS STAJER.....Indicted.
IGNATE BUTTNER.....Indicted.
SIMON BUTTNER.....Indicted.

New York's outlaws have been given a wholesome lesson. Many of them who have so far escaped arrest are profiting morally if not financially by this lesson.

The Evening World's law and order crusade has resulted, besides the conviction of Mr. Billy McGilroy, in the closing of the dens managed by the more notorious of these men and the indictment and arrest of the proprietors as well.

Dive-keepers of lesser degree have accepted this state of affairs as a warning of what is in store for themselves, and open violations of law and decency among them are notably less frequent than before the crusade was begun.

Police Supt. Murray's positive assurance, given to the Evening World, that the dive would all be closed and kept closed, has added to the consternation of those of the outlaws whose places still remain open, and, in anticipation of police raids, these resorts are no longer characterized by the open disorder and lawlessness which won them notoriety and made them attractive to crooks of all sorts.

The battle is not over. The crusade will go on until the outlaws have all been driven into obscurity.

CALLED UP TO PLEAD.

Eight of the Indicted Outlaws
Arraigned in General Sessions.

The indicted outlaws, who have been rounded up with so sharp a turn through the efforts of The Evening World, were obliged to make another pilgrimage to the Court of General Sessions to-day.

At least eight of them were put to this inconvenience, and they thought they were very badly treated.

Those who were summoned to plead this morning were Thomas G. Gould, Carey Welch, John Kelly, Thomas McCormick, Paul McCarthy, James Lynch, John H. McGilroy and Charles S. Smith.

The three other indicted outlaws, Dan Beriber, the keeper of "The Pickwick" at John J. McAlister and Louis Walters, will be called upon to plead their pleas some time next week. All of them are now at liberty under $1,000 bail each.

Smith, one of the indicted Bowery dive-keepers, who gave his name as Charles S. Smith when arrested, now figures as George Edward Smith.

This change of name was due to the objection urged by Charles Sawyer Dollar Smith, the Alderman from the Eighth Ward, who thought that Smith was trying to travel on his reputation, and this, he said, he couldn't stand.

Accordingly, Dive-keeper Smith changed his name to George Edward Smith, and the latter's wrath was appeased.

In anticipation of getting another good look at the leading figures in the unvarnished court which squatted in the ante-room of the District-Attorney's office yesterday, Part I. In General Sessions was well filled this morning with an expectant throng.

Before Judge Fitzgerald opened court the indicted outlaws began to straggle in. Most of them were accompanied by a numerous following of hangers-on, and the representatives of the short-haired and broken-nosed fraternity in the courtroom was a conspicuous feature of the audience.

Assistant-District Attorney Washburne Lynn, who has had charge of these cases from the beginning, this morning intimated that the Grand Jury had not come to the end of its investigation of the dive question.

More indictments may be expected to follow, if the police, who are working in conjunction with the District-Attorney's office, can furnish the witnesses to violations of the law.

Tom Gould was on hand with a big bluff, as usual.

"If they would give me a license," he said, "I would keep a straight place, and as now a saloon as you could find in New York."

ing, where he was told that he was charged with keeping a house of ill repute.

"How do you plead?"

"Not guilty," was the reply, and McCormick scouted off.

John H. McGilroy, Paul McCarthy, John Kelly and Smith followed in succession.

None of them were accompanied by their lawyers, and the response made by each one to the question of the clerk was:

"Not guilty."

When Gould was called he came swaggering up the aisle with a grin on his face.

He said: "Not guilty" in a loud tone, and then, making a low bow to the Court, walked slowly down to the door.

Carey Welch then went up and whispered a few words to the Clerk, and the ceremony was over.

The men got out of the building as soon as they had entered their pleas.

Their cases have not yet been set down for trial, and probably the date will not be decided upon for some time to come.

TO REVOKE DIVE LICENSES.

The Excise Board Will Consider Davis and Welch's Cases To-Day.

The Board of Excise will meet at 9 o'clock this afternoon to listen to the evidence against Manager Davis' "Excise Exchange," and Carey Welch's "Hole in the Wall," collected by Police Capt. Ryan and McCallagh.

Other places which the Board has asked the police to investigate are:

"Honest" John Kelly's, 820 Sixth avenue. James McCormick's (licensed to John Gleason), 528 Sixth avenue.

Frank Stevenson's (licensed to John McGilroy), 219 Breckin street.

Jim Sullivan's, Parley's Hotel (licensed to Peter F. Matthews), 78 Third avenue.

The saloon at 78 West Third street (licensed to John Maher).

The saloon at 253 Bowery (licensed to John H. McGilroy).

The saloon at 394 and 41 Bowery (licensed to Alexander Moldenbauer).

The saloon at 134 and 136 East Fourteenth street (licensed to Charles A. Berthold).

Yesterday President Meakin sent another communication to Superintendent of Police Murray, asking about the character and reputation of these additional places:

283 Bowery, Louis Walters.

327 Bowery, John J. McAlister.

327 Bowery, Paul McCarthy.

347 Seventh avenue, Louis Leober.

1347 Broadway, Daniel Scribner.

34 Bond street, John J. Murphy.

Supt. Murray ordered the investigations to be made, and the Board of Excise then summoned the dive-keepers to appear before it next Monday to show cause why their licenses should not be revoked.

DISORDER NO LONGER RAMPANT.

Most of the Dives Were Shut Up
Tight Last Night.

One of the comedians in "A Trip to Chinatown" nightly warbles:

I went into a Bowery dive;
I was glad to get out alive.

Had he taken a trip along the busy thoroughfare last night with an Evening World investigator he would have lost his fear in a large degree. If there was anything quite as dead as the more prominent dives themselves the investigator failed to see it.

There was an air of general depression on the part of the dive-keepers and of comparative security on the part of respectable people who were obliged to pass these dens on their way to their homes. Silence and darkness reigned in many dens where debauchery held sway before The Evening World's searchlight disclosed their lawless character.

Such a state of affairs has not been witnessed on the Bowery, or anywhere else in the city for that matter, for many, many years. Indeed, even the toughs admit it, and in their hatred for The Evening World they are paying it the compliment of cursing it in Billingsgate of the unholiest sort.

The general sentiment was expressed in the words of a light-fingered youth who stood in front of McGilroy's, at 253 Bowery, last night, catching a passing companion by the arm he said to him:

"Just go in there and take a look at that back room! I never saw anything like it!"

He pushed open the swinging door in the front of the saloon and showed his cousin the deserted assignment annex. The other rejoined:

"Well, I never would have believed it if I hadn't seen it," and both disappeared down the street.

There was also a marked disposition on the part of the Bowery night owl to slink away from their old stamping grounds.

MOST OF THE DIVE ANNEXES CLOSED.

The quietude was especially noticeable along the Bowery, in the haunts at 107, 253, 283, 290 and 327, kept respectively by Charles S. Smith, McGilroy, Louis Walters, Andrew McAlister and Paul McCarthy, all of whom were gathered in by the police drag net Tuesday night, and who are now under indictment.

Their dive annexes were all closed last night, as was also that of the notorious Excise Exchange at 336, whose manager, Alfred Davis, is to go before the Excise Board to-day and discuss the "early-closing movement."

Even "The Lenoxy," near McGilroy's, and John E. Murphy's, at 34 Bond street, kept their assignation-rooms closed.

Gloom was particularly thick in McAlister's den. Mr. McAlister stood at the door talking with a policeman, who remarked consolingly:

"Well, Andy, it's tough, ain't it?"

Andy nodded assent mournfully.

"There's no mistake," remarked the officer, sotto voce, as he kept on, "that Evening World is raising Cain."

There were a few other Bowery "coherent huts," however, that kept open in full blast, though they did make a show of respecting the law by closing at 1 o'clock this morning. Among these were Louis Walters' at 255 Bowery, Ignate Buttner's Orpheum at 294, and Simon Buttner's at 304. Ignate is said to run the latter place, although the license to this is in his name.

ONE OF THE WORST OF BOWERY DENNS.

No. 304, ever since its establishment about a year ago, has been one of the worst dives on the Bowery. Thieves of both sexes have resorted there, and the number of victims who have been robbed in the den is legion.

"Y. & S.," 511 Lexington
Has superseded all former make. All druggists.

EXTRA.

2 O'CLOCK.
CARDINALS DEAD.

Manning Passes Away at Westminster, Simeoni at Rome.

Influenza the Primary Disease in Both Instances.

The Pope's Blessing Comforts the English Prelate's Last Hours.

Simeoni Long Distinguished in High Offices of the Church.

[SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.]

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Cardinal Henry Edward Manning, the distinguished prelate of the Roman Catholic Church, died at 8:30 this morning at the Archbishop's house, Westminster.

The aged divine had been ill for some time past with the influenza, now prevailing as a violent epidemic throughout Europe.

Until within the past twenty-four hours, however, his condition was not regarded as serious and his physicians looked hopefully for a rally.

Yesterday morning there was a decided change for the worse, and the Cardinal's malady assumed a very grave aspect.

He was attacked with congestion of the lungs, and during the day his condition became more and more alarming.

He grew weaker and weaker every hour, and towards evening his physicians, unable to administer anything for his relief, pronounced his case a hopeless one, and a bulletin was issued stating that death might be expected at any moment.

The Cardinal retained consciousness, however, despite his extreme weakness and suffering, and when the last sacrament of the Church was administered to him, late in the afternoon, he was able to make the formal profession of his faith.

The ceremony was conducted with great impressiveness about the bedside of the dying Cardinal, in the presence of the full-robed canons of the diocese.

After the ceremony the venerable prelate pronounced his blessing upon the priests who attended him.

The Pope, who had been apprised of the sudden change for the worse in the Cardinal's condition, sent his blessing to the dying prelate by telegraph.

It reached its destination before the sufferer became unconscious, and seemed to give him great comfort and consolation.

He apparently realized that his end was near. Telegrams were also sent to the high church dignitaries in Europe and the United States, informing them that all hope of the Cardinal's recovery had been given up.

During the night the sufferings of the patient increased, and before morning he became unconscious, while those about his bedside watched over him and waited for the end.

He passed away without regaining consciousness.

Since his death was announced many telegrams and dispatches have been received from all parts of the world expressing grief for the loss of so eminent and distinguished a representative of the Church.

The Cardinal's illness originated in a slight cold which he contracted last Thursday, and which until Sunday last gave his physicians no cause for alarm.

His extreme age and feebleness and the rapid development of the epidemic disease, influenza, which followed, baffled the most skillful efforts of his medical attendants.

Since 1865 Cardinal Manning has lived in the Archbishop's house at Westminster, occupying a small, plainly furnished room upon the upper floor.

It was there that he passed his last illness.

His Eminence Henry Edward, Cardinal Priest of the Roman Church, and Archbishop of Westminster, was the son of the late Wm. Manning, esq., M. P., merchant, of London.

He was born at Tottenham, Hertfordshire, July 15, 1808, was educated at Harrow and Balliol College, Oxford, where he graduated B. A. in first-class honors in 1830 and became Fellow of Merton College.

He was for some time one of the select preachers in the University of Oxford, was appointed Rector of Lavington and Grafton, Sussex, 1834, and Archdeacon of Chichester in 1840.

These preferments he resigned in 1851, on joining the Roman Catholic Church, in which he entered the priesthood, and in 1857 founded an ecclesiastical congregation at Bayswater, entitled the Oblates of St. Charles Borromeo.

The degree of D.D. was conferred upon him at Rome and the office of Provost of the Catholic Archdiocese of Westminster, Protonotary Apostolic and Domestic Prelate to the Pope.

After the death of His Eminence Cardinal Wiseman Mr. Manning was consecrated Archbishop of Westminster, June 8, 1865.

Pope Pius IX. created him a Cardinal. Pope Pius IX. 1875, the title assigned to him being that of St. Andrew and Gregory on the coelian hill. The same Pontiff invested him with the cardinal's hat in a consistory held at the Vatican, Dec. 31, 1875.

He was the author of a large number of religious books, besides numerous sermons and pamphlets.

CARDINAL MANNING.

Cardinal Manning was well known, not only for his work as a Roman Catholic prelate and divine, but also for his exertions in the cause of temperance and social reform.

He had taken a leading part in the settlement of the labor disputes with which London has been troubled for several years past.

The celebration of the Cardinal's Episcopal jubilee took place on Sunday June 8, 1890.

CARDINAL SIMEONI DIES OF INFLUENZA AT ROME.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

ROME, Jan. 14.—Cardinal Simeoni, formerly Papal Secretary of State and Prefect General of the Propaganda, died to-day. His death was due to an attack of influenza from which he had been suffering for several days.

Giovanni Simeoni was born at Pallanuova July 23, 1816, and having been ordained a priest, he was, on account of his learning, employed in offices of importance. In 1847 he was Auditor of the Nunciature of Madrid. Some years later he filled the position of Prefect of the Propaganda, died to-day. His death was due to an attack of influenza from which he had been suffering for several days.

On all public buildings flags are displayed at half staff, and throughout the whole of London the sad intelligence has been received with expressions of the deepest sorrow.

The Duke was the eldest son of the Prince of Wales and his presumptive to the throne. His illness arose from an attack of congestion of the lungs, and he had been confined to his bed only seven days.

Last week Wednesday the Duke was of a party shooting over game covers in the vicinity of Sandringham Hall, the country home of the Prince of Wales.

On his return from the day's shooting the Duke was found to have taken cold. He had walked home instead of driving.

Thursday, he joined another party, against the wishes of his friends, but walked to the covers, accompanied by his betrothed, the Princess May of Teck.

After luncheon in the field the Duke returned home, complaining of feeling ill, and on Friday he took to his bed.

The cold that he had taken developed symptoms of pneumonia and the physicians soon found that one lung was congested.

He hoped to pull him through, as he had naturally a very strong constitution, but his efforts proved unavailing, as he continued to sink until the end came at 9:15 this morning.

Queen Victoria, his grandmother, was notified at once by telegraph, and the news was flashed all over the United Kingdom.

The Duke's mother, the Princess of Wales, was at his bedside all night and his bride-elect remained within call.

The Lord Mayor first received a telegram timed eight minutes past 9 o'clock, concerning the condition of the dying Prince.

This news was from Sir Francis De Winton, Comptroller and Treasurer of the Household of the Prince. The despatch was as follows:

"A change for the worse has occurred. We fear there is not much hope."

Then at 9:35 o'clock the Lord Mayor received the following:

"His Royal Highness passed away at 9:15 o'clock."

After this came the despatch from the Prince of Wales announcing his son's death.

On receipt of the news the Lord Mayor at once gave orders to have the great bell in St. Paul's Cathedral tolled and also sent the following message to the Prince of Wales:

"We are profoundly moved by the sad news and have communicated it to our fellow-citizens. We tender our deep and respectful sympathy with Your Royal Highness in this great sorrow and national calamity."

The news of the death of the young Prince was announced to the people of London by the tolling of the bells of St. Paul's Cathedral.

The bells of St. Paul's are only tolled for persons of royal rank or of great eminence in the nation.

People were not wholly unprepared for the news of the Duke's death.

Bulletins issued last evening stated that congestion had spread to both his lungs, and that he was sinking rapidly.

The Queen, who is at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, is expected to come to Sandringham Hall at once.

Up to noon no official bulletin of the death of the Duke had been issued at Sandringham Hall, but soon after 10 o'clock the blinds of the house were drawn, the flag on the church was placed at half-mast and the church bell began tolling. These facts gave to the people waiting outside the gates the first information that all was over.

The telegram from the Prince of Wales to Lord Mayor Evans announcing the death of the Duke was not posted at the Mansion House until 10:30 o'clock. When the little piece of white paper was put up there were

EXTRA.

THE PRINCE DEAD.

Albert Victor Beaten in His Brave
Wrestle with Disease.

England Mourns the Late Heir Presumptive to Her Throne.

And Albert Edward, of Wales, Has Lost His Eldest Son.

Fatal Pneumonia Follows a Cold
Taken on a Hunting Tour.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The Duke of Clarence and Avondale is dead.

The Prince of Wales has sent the following telegram to the Lord Mayor of London:

"Our beloved son passed away at 9 o'clock to-day."

Albert Edward.

The news of the death of the Duke of Clarence has caused widespread grief, and already demonstrations of the public feeling are everywhere apparent.

On all public buildings flags are displayed at half staff, and throughout the whole of London the sad intelligence has been received with expressions of the deepest sorrow.

The Duke was the eldest son of the Prince of Wales and his presumptive to the throne. His illness arose from an attack of congestion of the lungs, and he had been confined to his bed only seven days.

Last week Wednesday the Duke was of a party shooting over game covers in the vicinity of Sandringham Hall, the country home of the Prince of Wales.

On his return from the day's shooting the Duke was found to have taken cold. He had walked home instead of driving.

Thursday, he joined another party, against the wishes of his friends, but walked to the covers, accompanied by his betrothed, the Princess May of Teck.

After luncheon in the field the Duke returned home, complaining of feeling ill, and on Friday he took to his bed.

The cold that he had taken developed symptoms of pneumonia and the physicians soon found that one lung was congested.

He hoped to pull him through, as he had naturally a very strong constitution, but his efforts proved unavailing, as he continued to sink until the end came at 9:15 this morning.

Queen Victoria, his grandmother, was notified at once by telegraph, and the news was flashed all over the United Kingdom.

The Duke's mother, the Princess of Wales, was at his bedside all night and his bride-elect remained within call.

The Lord Mayor first received a telegram timed eight minutes past 9 o'clock, concerning the condition of the dying Prince.

This news was from Sir Francis De Winton, Comptroller and Treasurer of the Household of the Prince. The despatch was as follows:

"A change for the worse has occurred. We fear there is not much hope."

Then at 9:35 o'clock the Lord Mayor received the following:

"His Royal Highness passed away at 9:15 o'clock."

After this came the despatch from the Prince of Wales announcing his son's death.

On receipt of the news the Lord Mayor at once gave orders to have the great bell in St. Paul's Cathedral tolled and also sent the following message to the Prince of Wales:

"We are profoundly moved by the sad news and have communicated it to our fellow-citizens. We tender our deep and respectful sympathy with Your Royal Highness in this great sorrow and national calamity."

The news of the death of the young Prince was announced to the people of London by the tolling of the bells of St. Paul's Cathedral.

The bells of St. Paul's are only tolled for persons of royal rank or of great eminence in the nation.

People were not wholly unprepared for the news of the Duke's death.

Bulletins issued last evening stated that congestion had spread to both his lungs, and that he was sinking rapidly.

The Queen, who is at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, is expected to come to Sandringham Hall at once.

Up to noon no official bulletin of the death of the Duke had been issued at Sandringham Hall, but soon after 10 o'clock the blinds of the house were drawn, the flag on the church was placed at half-mast and the church bell began tolling. These facts gave to the people waiting outside the gates the first information that all was over.

The telegram from the Prince of Wales to Lord Mayor Evans announcing the death of the Duke was not posted at the Mansion House until 10:30 o'clock. When the little piece of white paper was put up there were

EXTRA.

THE PRINCE DEAD.

Albert Victor Beaten in His Brave
Wrestle with Disease.

England Mourns the